

Charles Ornstein

Charles Ornstein is a senior reporter at ProPublica, a nonprofit investigative news organization based in New York. Prior to joining ProPublica in 2008, he was a member of the metro investigative projects team at the Los Angeles Times. In 2004, Ornstein was a lead author on a series on Martin Luther King Jr./Drew Medical Center, a troubled hospital in South Los Angeles. The articles won the 2005 Pulitzer Prize for Public Service. In 2009, Ornstein co-authored a series of stories that detailed serious failures in oversight by the California Board of Registered Nursing and nursing boards around the country. The work was a finalist for the 2010 Pulitzer Prize for Public Service. Ornstein's project Dollars for Docs was awarded the 2010 Gannett Award for Innovation in Watchdog Journalism from Investigative Reporters & Editors. His most recent project, The Prescribers, won the Philip Meyer Award and the FOIA Award from IRE. Ornstein is a board member and past president of the Association of Health Care Journalists, as well as an adjunct professor at the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. He previously worked at The Dallas Morning News, where he covered health care on the business desk and worked in the Washington bureau. You can follow him at @CharlesOrnstein.
